County reinforces its anti-nuke dump stance

By BILL SHERROD

The Appomattox County Board of Supervisors reinforced their opposition to possible location of a low-level radiation waste disposal site in the county at their meeting Friday.

At the request of Watkins M. Abbitt, Jr., board members agreed to pass a resolution opposing the location of the nuclear dump site in the county.

Anticipating the state's search for a nuclear waste disposal site, the board last year passed an ordinance prohibiting location of any hazardous waste disposal facilities in Appomattox County.

Abbitt, a member of the State Water Control Board, requested that the supervisors pass a resolution similar to one passed recently by Charlotte County opposing any location of a nuclear dump site in that county, or in any county bordering Charlotte.

Appomattox and Charlotte Counties are two of 18 counties in Virginia being considered in a study which the state is conducting for finding a location for a possible nuclear dump site.

Board member Franklin Vaughan added that the Appomatox supervisors will request the Central Virginia Planning District Commission to go on record as opposing location of a nuclear dump site anywhere in the district.

Bill Britton, the county's special projects assistant and emergency services coordinator, reported on the nuclear disposal site issue in the afternoon session of the board meeting.

Britton, who attended a meeting between representatives of local governments and representatives of the state's Solid Waste Commission and the state Health Department Friday morning, explained that Virginia is one of seven states currently using a dump site in South Carolina for disposal of its low-level radioactive waste.

The dump in South Carolina will be closed by 1992, according to Britton. After that, Virginia will have to dispose of its low-level radioactive waste elsewhere.

The state has one of two options: either take care of its own waste or join a pact with the other six states for locating a regional disposal site.

The pact idea involves selecting one of the seven states by lottery for the dump site "host" state. The dump would be used for a specified amount of time - 20 years, for example - and at the end of that period, another state would be chosen by lot for a host state. States which have already hosted the dump site would be removed from the lottery after their host time expires, according to Britton. South Carolina would not be included in the initial lottery.

Britton noted that of the states which would be involved in the pact, Virginia is the third largest producer of low-level radioactive waste.

Britton said the dump is South Carolina employs in excess of 100 people.

"Virginia's options are to join the pact and take a one-in-six chance of having the dump site here, or take care of our own waste in the state," Britton concluded.

A large part of Appoomattox County is under consideration for possible location of the dump site. Portions of Buckingham, Nelson, Amherst, Bedford, and Charlotte and Prince Edward Counties are being considered in the state's study as well, along with several other counties south, east and north of Appomattox.

Summer in January

DAN AND EDNA CARSON of Appomattox can't complain about the weather at their home - as seen in this photo, the roses are blooming and the temperature's balmy. The Carsons are missionaries in Limuru, Kenya, and, since that country is south of the equator, January is summertime. The Carsons, who have been in Kenya since February of last year, recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with the help of some old friends from Appomattox. See details, page 7. Coleman to chair board

Horace W. Coleman, Jr., of near Pamplin was elected chairman of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors at their meeting Friday.

Coleman replaces fellow board member J. Franklin Vaughan, who has served as chairman of the board for the past year.

MS support group to meet

There will be a meeting of the Appomattox County MS Support Group next Tuesday, Jan. 25, at 7:30 in Memorial Methodist Church.

The meeting will be held in the church's lower level meeting room.

A representative from the Blue Ridge Chapter of the MS Society in Charlottesville will be present at the local meeting.

All MS patients, family and friends are invited to attend this meeting.

For additional information, contact Robin Britton at 352-2554.

Looking Inside

RAIDER GUARD GARY FERGUSON looks to the inside before passing the ball in last Tuesday night's 70-54 Seminole District basketball victory over Buckingham. Ferguson, whose defensive play sparked the Raiders in their win against Rustburg Friday night, was one of four players cited by the coaching staff for their outstanding performances last week. School board has busy meeting

Meeting in regular session on Wednesday, Jan. 12, the Appomattox County School Board received information and took action in the following areas:

Received bids on roof repair projects at Appomattox Elementary and Appomattox Primary Schools and delayed action until Monday, Jan. 17. At the special meeting the low bid of $56,805.00 submitted by Woodall and Lang, Inc., Lynchburg, was accepted.

Was informed that the only change in the Annual and Six-Year Special Education Plan was the addition of a teacher of emotionally disturbed students for the 1983-84 session and the vocational education plan for 1983-84 would remain unchanged. Both plans were approved by the board.

Received and approved a change order deduction of $1,098.00 on the Appomattox Primary School renovation project which resulted from a change in emergency lights.

Received a report that Stage II renovation of Appomattox Middle School has been completed with the exception of painting the interior and exterior of the building which will be accomplished this summer.

Received the orientation and registration program for parents and students for the 1983-84 session. Activities of this program will begin Jan. 14 and continue through May. It was noted that students and parents are provided with information to help them in making decisions regarding course offerings and career choices. School personnel will be available to answer questions and to discuss pertinent information.

Received a report from Mrs. Mary Turner, ACHS Mathematics Teacher, that the mathematics department recommended that an additional credit in mathematics be required for graduation from Appomattox County High School. During an exchange of ideas it was pointed out that many students should take additional math courses. However, concern was expressed that science teachers may also be justified in requesting an additional credit in that area. Several members of the board indicated a concern relative to mandating additional graduation requirments. The board agreed that the issue is important and that students, teachers and parents should express their ideas regarding additional graduation requirements. Comments should be presented in writing to Appomattox County School Board, P. O. Box 548, Appomattox, Virginia by Feb. 10, 1983.

Received a report that student enrollment at the end of December was 2524. The estimated enrollment upon which the 1982-83 budget was based was 2530. The projected enrollment for 1983-84 is 2481 which will result in a possible reduction of two teaching positions at the elementary level.

Received a report from Kathy Whately, AMS English Teacher, and Roland Murphy, AMS Parent/Teacher Association President, that nothing be done structurally to the second floor of the old AMS auditorium that would hinder the future development of the facility as a large meeting room. It was further requested that the second floor of the building be available to Middle School students and faculty for use as a large meeting room as soon as the building is ready for occupancy.

Greetings from Martha Street on a crisp Monday morning in January. Often I wish that prices could drop as fast as the meter on a fuel tank. Mild weather has spoiled us, but I note that wood piles are getting smaller at homes heated that way. I am planning no celebration for the arrival of February. June for celebration when gardening time arrives. Ah yes, thus far I have received eight seed and nursery catalogs. It appears that each one manages to feature some item not found elsewhere. Bamboo, or huge melons and/or squash. Or garden peas where you eat'em pod and all. I like the catalogs so I send a small order, saving most of my needs to be filled locally.

* * *

A thing of beauty is a joy forever. Maybe so, maybe not, as in the case of a jaybird. For a week a baby jay has been visiting my windowside feeder and indeed it is a beauty. Not too popular with the other birds, but I favor democracy at the table.

* * *

My car was parked alongside Route 460 near the town limits, and I decided to count passing cars and trucks. It was not at peak traffic hours, which would include those going or coming from work or school buses. Anyway, I counted for five minutes and the total was 132. Later on I repeated the count and the total was about the same. Now, multiply that out and be amazed at how many cars a day pass through Appomattox, Times, let us say, two people per vehicle. It ain't a lonesome road.

* * *

Did you notice the beautiful red sunset Sunday? Often a red sunset indicates approaching wind. If so, this one was worth it.

* * *

Cheers for ACHS basketballers. Downed Rustburg 54-49. Let's see, that's Ferguson, K and G. Caldwell, Turner, Fleshman, Miller J. and Miller R.

So-o-o, Billy Martin is coming back to manage the New York Yankees again. Number three, I believe and one thing for sure, he will make it exciting and boost attendance.

Note pad item. What is being planned for observance of April 9 at Old Appomattox this year? April 9 is Appomattox's date in history.

* * *

Quiz: A local attorney was at the University of Arizona two years. Wants guess. I found out about by asking "What's the most beautiful state?" Besides, that is a good question. Hope you would say Virginia, as I did. New Mexico was my second choice. But then, there are a few states I have not visited and some were visited at the wrong time of the year. Let's just say "America, the Beautiful."

School is now factory

By FRANCES PAULETTE

Brandy Ann Manufacturing, Pamplin's newest industry, held Open House on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 16 with approximately 300 in attendance.

The factory, which began production on January 3 in the old Pamplin Elementary School building, is named for the daughters of Plant Manager Jim Webb and his wife, Sue.

"We are proud of our 30 employees," said Webb, "we hope to be up to full capacity, which is approximately 50, by the first of February or shortly thereafter."

"I only wish I could provide work for every person who makes application," said Webb. "However, I am glad that we've got things going and I'm really optimistic about the future," he added.

Some of the thirty workers remember their new plant site as their school. In fact, one worker prefers it as a factory!

"I remember going to school here," said Fannie Terry, who works as button hole girl and also works on the bar tack machine. "I'll tell you something," she laughed, "it's a whole lot better working here than going to school!"

Phyllis Garrison of Madisonville, one of the employees also remembers the school days she spent at Pamplin school.

"I feel kind of strange," laughed Phyllis. "Everything seems so much smaller today than it did when we were going to school. I'm really glad to have a job."

Howard T. Williams, a Pamplin native, and a 1950 graduate of Pamplin High School, is in charge of General Maintenance for the new factory.

Williams remembers his school days at the old high school.

"We did all right in sports," said Williams with a smile, "I remember the high school basketball team went to State Championship two years in a row when I was there."

So, things have changed. The desks have given way to machines; the pencils and books have been replaced with spools of colored thread and bolts of bright materials. When change takes place, communities have to adapt and Pamplin's doing just that ... changing and growing, for a better tomorrow.
